

Dear Presenter,

Every year, the Big Horn Outdoor Adventure Show draws together some of the most knowledgeable hunters, anglers, and outdoor professionals in the Northwest, and we would like you to be among them. As we build the lineup for the upcoming show, we invite you to share your expertise with an audience that comes ready to learn.

Big Horn University is one of the newer features of the show, and one we are steadily building into a foundation of the event. At its core is our Pro Seminar Series, where presenters teach across four stages, including the Fish Theater, our giant demonstration tank, where anglers can show technique, presentation, and on-the-water adjustments in real time. We are also expanding Big Horn University to include hands-on and interactive classes, creating even more ways for attendees to learn directly from the pros. Whether your specialty is backcountry hunting, working a favorite fishery, gear and electronics, or hard-earned field skills, you will be speaking to an engaged crowd that comes specifically to learn from people who have put in the years.

To help us plan the schedule and keep similar topics from landing in the same time slot (we would rather not run two walleye seminars head to head) we ask that you complete the attached application form and return it to info@inwc.org. The form gives us the details we need for marketing and scheduling. Once we have reviewed the submissions, we will follow up to confirm your session, stage, and time.

We would love to have you on the program, and we think you will find the Big Horn crowd every bit as passionate about the outdoors as you are. Thank you for considering it and we look forward to reviewing your proposal.

Sincerely,

Melannie Jones
